

The CITY OF IRVINE for Kids!

About the City of Irvine

Irvine was incorporated as a City December 28, 1971. Since then, it has become a nationally recognized City that spans 66 square miles and boasts a population of 318,629 people.

Irvine is recognized as one of America's safest and most successful master-planned urban communities, with top-rated schools, a thriving business atmosphere, active plans to protect our environment, and a deep respect and commitment to diversity. These factors all contribute to Irvine's enviable quality of life.

Irvine is a family-friendly City that includes 16,000 acres of open space, 22 community parks, 188 sports fields, and is the home of the Great Park.

History of Irvine

Early Civilization

Archaeological research establishes prehistoric man in the Irvine area at least 12,000 years ago, possibly even as early as 18,000 years ago. Scattered evidence of early campsites and rock shelters can be seen in the undeveloped parts of the City.

Two Native American groups, the Gabrielinos and Juaneños, inhabited the Irvine area around 2,000 years ago. Villages were located near the present San Joaquin Marsh and the San Joaquin Golf Course. The Gabrielinos and Juaneños enjoyed an abundant food supply of shellfish, waterfowl, and land animals. They lived in round, woven huts and were excellent basket weavers and jewelry makers of seashell and stone.

1800s–1900s

In 1837, San Juan Capistrano mission lands were granted to Don José Sepulveda, later becoming Rancho San Joaquin. Rancho Lomas de Santiago was granted to Teodosio Yorba in 1846.

In that year, the Mexican army was defeated in the final battle of the Mexican-American War. The Treaty of Guadalupe was signed, and California became part of the United States. The Congressional Act of 1851 forced landholders to reapply to the Board of Land Commissioners to get valid titles to their ranchos.

Original grantees, however, produced large families who were deeding, selling, and trading portions of the large ranchos to family members and outsiders. Rancho Santiago de Santa Ana fell prey to tangled titles. In 1868, Abel Stearns, an outside investor, was successful in his suit to dissolve the rancho and divide the property among the claimants, four of whom were prosperous sheep ranchers: James Irvine, Benjamin and Thomas Flint, and Llewellyn Bixby.

Gaspar de Portolá, a Spanish explorer, entered the San Joaquin Valley in 1769, abruptly ending the tranquil life of the Native Americans. With the Spanish came forts, missions, and herds of cattle. The King of Spain parceled out lands for missions and a few large, private land grants.

Gaspar de Portola

In 1821, after gaining independence from Spain, the Mexican government secularized the missions, assumed control of land holdings, and began distributing ranchos to influential Mexican citizens who applied for grants. Three large Spanish/Mexican grants made up Rancho Santiago de Santa Ana, Rancho San Joaquin, and Rancho Lomas de Santiago. The land later became the Irvine Ranch.

The oldest and only Spanish grant, Rancho Santiago de Santa Ana, was granted to the Yorba family and confirmed by the Mexican government.

The Irvine Ranch lands were originally devoted to cattle and sheep. Operations shifted to agriculture in the late 1800s.

Agricultural enterprises fueled the economic development of Irvine in the years leading up to World War II. By 1910, Irvine Ranch was known as one of the state's most productive growing enterprises.

Meanwhile, Don José Sepulveda, owner of Rancho San Joaquin, was heavily in debt. In 1864, during the year of the Great Drought, he sold his 50,000 acres to Irvine, the Flints, and Bixby for $18,000. In 1866, they acquired the 47,000-acre Rancho Lomas de Santiago for $7,000. Much of the ranch was not suitable for cultivation, but with the Santa Ana River on the north, it secured valuable water rights.

The Irvine, Flint, and Bixby ranches were devoted to sheep grazing, although tenant farming was permitted in the 1870s. In 1878, James Irvine acquired his partners' interest for $150,000. His 110,000 acres stretched 23 miles from the Pacific Ocean to the Santa Ana River.

James Irvine died in 1886. In 1894, his son, James Irvine II, came into full possession of the ranch — which he incorporated into the Irvine Company just one year later. James Irvine II shifted ranch operations to field crops, including olive and citrus orchards.

1900s–2000s

During World War I, agriculture intensified. By 1918, 60,000 acres of lima beans were grown on the Irvine Ranch. During World War II, two Marine Corps facilities were built on land sold to the government by the Irvine Company. James Irvine II died in 1947 at the age of 80. Presidency of the Irvine Company fell to his son, Myford, who began opening small sections of the ranch for urban development. Myford died in 1959, and the Regents of the University of California asked the Irvine Company for 1,000 acres to build a new campus. The Irvine Company agreed, and the regents accepted the land and purchased an additional 500 acres.

The university's consulting architect, William Pereira, and Irvine Company planners drew up master plans for a city of 50,000 people around the university with industrial zones, residential and recreational areas, commercial centers, and greenbelts. The Irvine Industrial Complex West (now known as the Irvine Business Complex) opened and the villages of Turtle Rock, University Park, Culverdale, the Ranch, and Walnut were built by 1970.

Above, lima beans and dry crops are tended to on the Irvine Ranch, which would become known as the top producer of lima beans in the world. By 1918, 60,000 acres of lima beans were grown on the Irvine Ranch.

City Incorporates in 1971

On December 28, 1971, the residents of these communities voted to incorporate a substantially larger City than that envisioned by the original Pereira plan, in order to control the future of the area and protect its tax base.

Petitions calling for Irvine's cityhood are counted.

History of Irvine

Historical Residents of Irvine

Don José Sepulveda

Don José Sepulveda acquired Rancho San Joaquin in a Mexican land grant in 1841. Sepulveda, known as the most famous horseman of his era, enjoyed life as one of the wealthiest cattle barons in California. Severe droughts in 1863-1864 forced Sepulveda to sell his lands. The 50,000-acre parcel was sold to James Irvine and his three partners for $18,000 — about 37 cents an acre.

James Irvine

James Irvine immigrated to America in 1846 from Ireland. He worked in the gold industry in San Francisco before purchasing interest in a commission house. Friends began a venture raising sheep, and Irvine financed a 50% share in the company. The land, which would become the Irvine Ranch, was purchased in 1864 in three phases, beginning with Sepulveda's Rancho San Joaquin. By 1878, Irvine bought out his partners to become the sole owner of the ranch.

James Irvine II

James Irvine II, James Irvine's only son, inherited the ranch October 16, 1892, his 25th birthday. In 1894, he incorporated the ranch to the Irvine Company and shifted emphasis from cattle and sheep to agriculture. The Irvine Ranch became the largest producer of lima beans and the second largest producer of Valencia oranges. The ranch produced much of the world's supply of chili peppers, walnuts, avocados, strawberries, and celery.

Myford Irvine

James Irvine II's unexpected death in 1947 left the presidency of the Irvine Company to his only remaining child, Myford Plum Irvine. Myford led the ranch away from his father's vision and straight into residential and commercial development. Myford was the first major landowner to allow development to proceed southwards in the county.

Irvine Today and Beyond

By 2004, the City of Irvine had a population of 171,700 and a total land area of 55.2 square miles. Future plans called for a population of more than 200,000 on 46.7 square miles by the year 2020. Irvine exceeded those estimates in 2008 and currently has a population of 318,629 that spans 66 square miles!

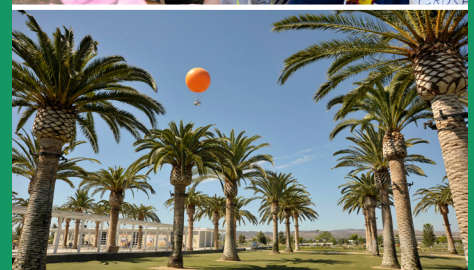

For five decades, residents and businesses have chosen to call the City of Irvine home because of its dedication to maintaining its reputation as one of the safest, master-planned, business-friendly communities in the United States.

Irvine is home to 62 parks, more than 300 sports fields, and 16,000 acres of open space, along with over 75,000 trees.

Its 318,629 residents make the City a vibrant, community-minded place to live.

The nearly 1,300-acre Great Park—already 500 acres open with 300 more on the way — offers a sports complex, art gallery, balloon, carousel, playgrounds, trails, an ice arena, and a water park.

The City also offers hundreds of classes and programs for all ages, from STEM and sports to arts and crafts.

Your Government

Irvine City Hall is located at 1 Civic Center Plaza. City Council meetings are held the second and fourth Tuesday of each month in the City Council Chamber.

Mayor & City Council

The City of Irvine was incorporated on December 28, 1971, under the general laws of the State of California. The City operates under a charter adopted in 1975, utilizing a City Council-Manager form of government. The Irvine City Council is made up of a Mayor and six Councilmembers, for a total of seven people elected by the citizens.

The Mayor is popularly elected and serves a term of two years. City Councilmembers each serve a term of four years and are elected by district. The Mayor and Councilmembers may serve no more than two full consecutive terms.

Current Irvine City Council

Irvine's current City Council includes:

- Mayor Larry Agran
- Vice Mayor James Mai (District 3)
- Councilmember Melinda Liu (District 1)
- Councilmember William Go (District 2)
- Councilmember Mike Carroll (District 4)
- Councilmember Betty Martinez Franco (District 5)
- Councilmember Kathleen Treseder (At-Large)

City Elections

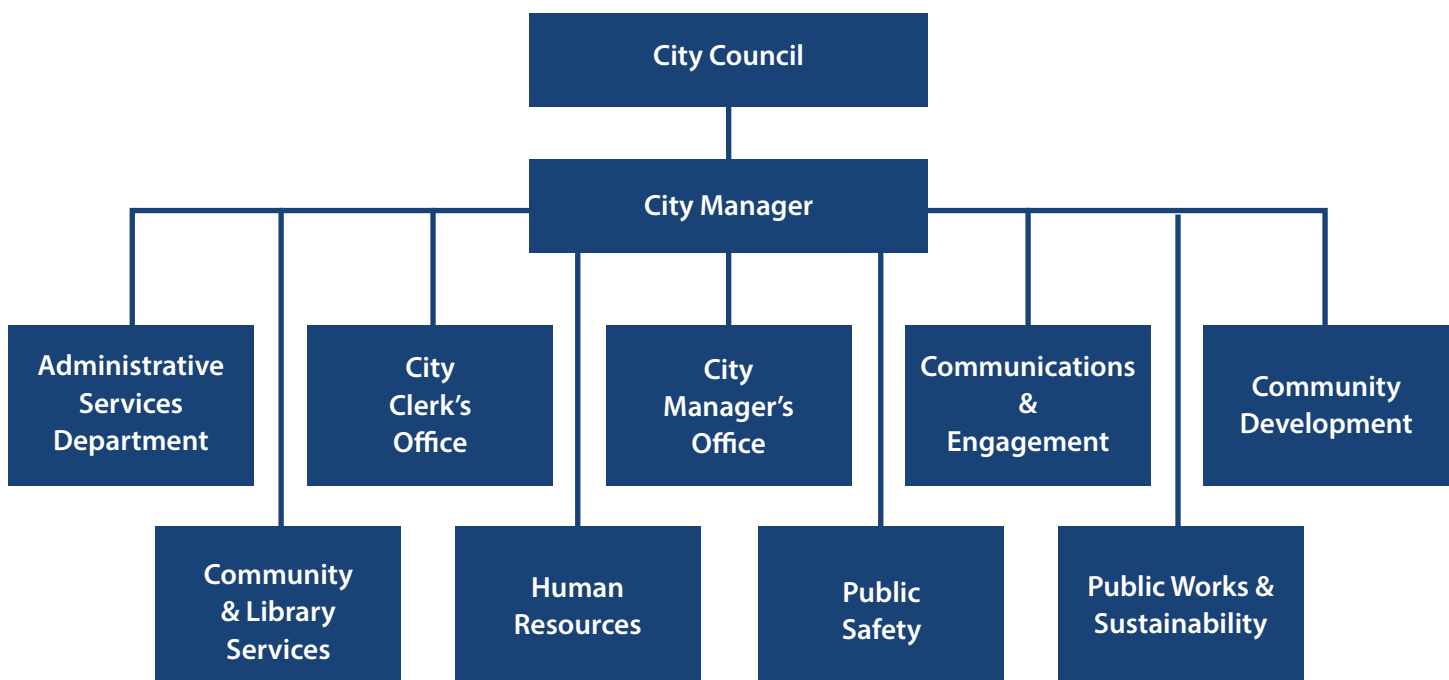

Elections are held in even-numbered years on the first Tuesday following the first Monday in November. Any legal resident of the City who is 18 years or older and is a registered voter may run for Mayor or Council.

City Departments

The City of Irvine's government functions are coordinated by nine operating departments.

Together, these departments manage and perform all of the City's business and services.

City Government Structure

City Departments

Administrative Services

cityofirvine.org/administrativeservices

Administrative Services is committed to sound fiscal stewardship in maximizing the City's ability to deliver high-quality services to the community. The department consists of six areas: Administration, Fiscal Services, Budget and Strategic Planning, Purchasing, Information Technology, and Geographical Information Systems (GIS).

City Clerk's Office

cityofirvine.org/cityclerk

The City Clerk's Office administers democratic processes, including municipal elections, government transparency, access to city records, and all legislative actions ensuring transparency to the public. The City Clerk Office also adheres to compliance with federal, state, and local statutes including the Political Reform Act, the Brown Act, and the Public Records Act. The department is comprised of multiple divisions, including Legislative Services, Office of Records and Information, Passport Services, Mail and Duplicating, and Main Reception.

City Manager's Office

cityofirvine.org/citymanagersoffice

The City Manager's Office manages the activities and operations of the City, ensuring the provision of exceptional quality services. As a Council-Manager form of government, the City Manager's Office is responsible for the implementation of policy decisions established by the Irvine City Council. The City Manager's Office includes legislative support, budget development and strategic planning, economic development, health & wellness, and legal service functions for the City.

Communications & Engagement

cityofirvine.org

The Communications & Engagement Department plays a crucial role in maintaining an effective flow of information between the City government and its residents, businesses, and visitors. Made up of four divisions: Marketing & Communications, Irvine Community Television, Engagement, and the Hotel Improvement District, the department is responsible for ensuring that the public is well-informed about City policies, initiatives, events, programs, and services. It manages various channels of communication, including the City website; its award-winning quarterly magazine, Inside Irvine; social media platforms; press releases; digital media; video; and more, to disseminate important information to the community. The department fosters international relationships by welcoming visiting delegations and strengthening Irvine's global ties through its Sister City and Friendship City programs.

Community Development

cityofirvine.org/communitydevelopment

The Community Development Department plans, implements, and enforces construction development standards and performance criteria that facilitate the creation and maintenance of a built environment that is safe, vibrant, and aesthetically pleasing. The department consists of two primary divisions — Planning and Development Services and Building & Safety — with support functions for each provided through the Community Development Assistance Center.

Community & Library Services

cityofirvine.org/communityservices

Community & Library Services is responsible for an array of services and facilities for City residents and visitors. Responsibilities include class registration, facility reservations, family and child services, animal care, aquatics, sports, leisure, library services, open space/trails, parks, and a fine arts complex.

Human Resources

cityofirvine.org/humanresources

Human Resources strives to maximize the City's organizational performance and deliver high-quality services by providing leadership, expertise, and guidance. The team is committed to the motto "People Come First" and recognizes the importance of supporting not only individual employees but also the departments and teams throughout the City. Service areas include Human Resources Business Partners assigned to each department, labor and employee relations, classification and compensation, employee benefits, equal employment opportunities, training and organizational development, employee engagement, human resources information systems, the One Irvine Workforce grant management and apprenticeship program, and risk management.

Public Safety

cityofirvine.org/publicsafety

The Public Safety Department is a full-service public safety agency that provides several special program areas, including Emergency Management, Crime Prevention, Youth Services, K-9s, Traffic Enforcement, Investigations, Crime Scene Investigation, and the Special Weapons and Tactics Team (SWAT). Irvine is committed to a full community-oriented policing concept that interfaces closely with all segments of the community.

Public Works & Sustainability

cityofirvine.org/public-works-sustainability-department

The Public Works & Sustainability Department combines the strengths of Administration & Planning, Park Development, Transportation Planning & Mobility, Infrastructure Maintenance & Operations, Capital Project Delivery, and Sustainability & Environmental Programs to create a unified approach to infrastructure management and sustainability. City assets include streetscapes, open space, City parks (community and neighborhood), athletic fields, bike trails, roadways, traffic signals, and more. The Capital Improvement Program has an annual delivery of $100 million in capital projects, in addition to the delivery of the globally relevant Great Park.

Irvine Demographics

Irvine's strength is its people. The City is the success it is today because of the hardworking, community-minded citizens who have chosen Irvine as their home.

Irvine's population has grown significantly over the past 50 years. Since 1990, its population has grown by an average of 37% every decade, and since 2020, that figure has increased by 11%. Because Irvine is a relatively new City and started with a young population base, only 12.7% of Irvine's population was in the 55 and older category in 1990. In the future, much of the population is expected to be older than 55.

Find more demographics at cityofirvine.org/demographics.

Irvine is recognized as one of the most ethnically diverse and fully integrated cities in the country. It embraces and celebrates diversity in all aspects and fosters an environment that represents the many cultures, backgrounds, and perspectives that make up its unique and dynamic community.

Fun Facts About Irvine

Did you know that the City of Irvine was once the lima bean capital of the world? There are many interesting and little-known facts about this great City. Check them out!

The agapanthus, also known as the Lily of the Nile, is the City's official flower. It has funnel-shaped flowers with varying shades of blue colors with white flowering.

The official insect of the City is the Western tiger swallowtail, commonly known as the swallowtail butterfly. Its wings are yellow with black stripes, and it has blue and orange spots near its tail.

Michelson Drive was named after Dr. Albert Michelson, a famous physicist who was the first person to accurately measure the speed of light. Ironically, Michelson Drive once had one of the slowest speed limits of all the roads in Irvine.

Lima beans once encompassed 60,000 acres in Irvine. During the peak of production, Irvine was one of the largest producers of lima beans in the world.

The Irvine Company donated 1,000 acres and sold over 500 acres of land to the University of California, Irvine. Classes began in September 1965. The mascot for UC Irvine is the anteater. Go Anteaters!

The third National Scout Jamboree was held in 1953 on the Irvine Ranch. More than 51,000 Scouts attended the weeklong event. After, a main road in Irvine was named in honor of the event — known today as Jamboree Road.

Did you know asparagus is the official vegetable of the City of Irvine? Look closely at the City logo and you can also find it represented there.

Sister Cities Foundation

Recognizing the need to foster goodwill and understanding between Irvine and other nations, the City established this international program in 1989 to engage Irvine's diverse community.

Tsukuba, Japan

About one hour northeast of Tokyo is Tsukuba, a modern, planned City with a population of 254,000. A large community of international scholars and researchers gives the City a unique cosmopolitan quality. Tsukuba has achieved worldwide recognition as a major scientific and technology center, and has striking demographic, economic, academic, cultural, and geographic similarities to Irvine.

Hermosillo, Mexico

Hermosillo, capital of the state of Sonora, is about 250 miles south of Tucson, Arizona. With a population of 936,263, the region maintains a strong agriculture and ranching industry. Because of its nearby sandy beaches, Hermosillo is also developing its tourism industry. The City of Hermosillo is home to both light and heavy industrial development and is the center for commerce in Sonora.

Taoyuan, Taiwan

Located nearly 20 miles from Taipei, the capital of Taiwan, Taoyuan has a population of approximately 2.3 million. As a result of rapid economic development, Taoyuan has been transformed from a rural, agricultural community to a modern, industrial metropolis. It is one of the oldest cities in Taoyuan County and serves as the region's center of politics, culture, and business.

Seocho-gu, Korea

With a population of more than 401,749, Seocho-gu is home to many cultural and art-related facilities and historical sites. Seocho-gu is referred to as the "City of Corporation and IT Industry," with major companies such as Samsung and Hyundai headquartered within its borders. It is the largest of 25 districts in Seoul and boasts a variety of first-class cafes, restaurants, and hotels.
